Michael King, Jr., the man who would become known to the world as Martin Luther King, Jr., was a complex and multifaceted figure. He was a preacher, activist, leader, and Nobel Peace Prize winner. But behind these public roles, there were eight distinct lives that shaped the man and his mission.

The Preacher

Michael King was born into a family of preachers. His father, Martin Luther King, Sr., was a Baptist minister, and his mother, Alberta King, was a devout Christian. From an early age, Michael was exposed to the power of the pulpit, and he quickly developed a deep faith in God.

In 1948, Michael King was ordained as a Baptist minister. He served as pastor of several churches in Montgomery, Alabama, and Atlanta, Georgia. As a preacher, he used his powerful oratory skills to inspire and motivate his congregation. He preached about the importance of love, forgiveness, and social justice.

The Activist

Michael King's faith led him to activism. He believed that Christianity was a call to action, and he was determined to use his platform to fight for justice and equality.

In 1955, Michael King became involved in the Montgomery bus boycott. This boycott was sparked by the arrest of Rosa Parks, an African American woman who refused to give up her seat to a white man on a public bus. Michael King emerged as a leader of the boycott, and he helped to organize and sustain the protest for over a year.

In 1957, Michael King co-founded the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC). The SCLC was an organization dedicated to promoting nonviolent resistance to segregation and discrimination. Michael King served as the SCLC's first president, and he led the organization in some of the most important civil rights campaigns of the 1950s and 1960s.

Michael King's leadership was not limited to the civil rights movement. He also spoke out against poverty, war, and injustice around the world. He was a tireless advocate for peace and human rights.

The Nobel Peace Prize Winner

In 1964, Michael King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his work in the civil rights movement. He was the youngest person ever to receive the Nobel Peace Prize.

The Nobel Peace Prize was a major recognition of Michael King's achievements. It also helped to raise awareness of the civil rights movement around the world.

The Husband and Father

Michael King was a devoted husband and father. He married Coretta Scott in 1953, and they had four children together.
